Sargam Griffin on Linden Street

Hayes Valley's Sagan Piechota Architecture will soon be hosting a reception for German artist turned Californian Sargam Griffin, and I'm looking forward to seeing the citrus colored work. While the Saturday opening is invite only, her creative process is well worth a look. She describes it as follows:

We live in tumultuous times of exponential change. As a whole – people, environment, society and the world – we are all at a crossroads. The old ways of thinking, acting, responding and consuming are not working. It is significant to me as a painter to capture this important time in my creative process.
